"An ambitious, pugnacious, eccentric, sprawling new book.... Duban has a great deal to say; much of it is immensely valuable." – Sandra Kotta

THE SHIPWRECK SEA:

LOVE POEMS AND ESSAYS IN A CLASSICAL MODE

Duban's latest work (March 2019) includes translations of Sappho, Anacreon, and other Greek lyric poets as well as a controversial essay on gender's role in artistic creation and a definitive essay on Horace's famed Odes 1.5. The book concludes with classically inspired original poetry.

THE LESBIAN LYRE:

RECLAIMING SAPPHO FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Heralded as "a humanities degree between two covers." Presented in eight parts comprising thirty-four chapters, it runs the aesthetic and historical gamut from Greek lyric and epic poetry (and their often willful mistranslation) to the ruinous effects of Ezra Pound and modernism on both the appreciation and translation of the classics.
